On 8/26/92 EEB reviewed an emergency use exemption for myclobutanil on strawberries in California and concluded that fish, invertebrate, and insect species will not be at risk, on either an acute or a chronic basis. Although birds were not expected to be at risk from acute toxicity, there was the possibility of chronic hazard. Of all of the endangered birds found within the counties proposed in the emergency exemption, only the Aleutian Canada goose had feeding habits that might put it at risk.

California has also requested that the exemption include San Bernardino county. As the Canada goose is not found in San Bernardino county, adding the county does not raise any concerns.

If you have any questions, please call Heather Mansfield at 305-5064.
